

BUNBURY FAMILY RELATIONSHIP CENTRE

Family Relationship Centres provide Family Dispute Resolution Services to help separating parents discuss care arrangements with the intent of reaching agreements in the best interests of their children.

During the Intake and Assessment Session a thorough screening is done to determine if mediation is appropriate. Information and referrals are offered to families during these sessions.

Throughout the Family Dispute Resolution process, a child focussed approach is maintained and services are delivered to families at all stages of life, with specific sensitivity to cultural needs. There is a strong focus on strengthening family relationships and assisting with relationship difficulties by increasing parental understanding of the impact conflict has on children and offering support in the challenges and adjustments during or after separation.

As an initiative of the Federal Government, Family Relationship Centres offer mediation for disputes over parenting matters, enabling parents to participate in negotiated outcomes and creating an alternative option to procedures in the Family Court.
